Russia Won't Change, UN Council Told

By BRUCE W. MUNN

United Press Staff Correspondent

UNITED NATIONS (UP)—Russia told the United Nations Security Council today there was "no ground for any change" in the Soviet Union's opposition to an American proposal for an Arctic "open skies" inspection plan.

Soviet Ambassador Arkady A. Sobolev said a compromise Swedish amendment to the U.S. resolution accepted by the United States and proposing the Arctic plan "does nothing to alter our negative attitude" toward the American measure.

He said two days' debate "only confirmed the need for the Security Council to put an end to the dangerous playing with fire that American military men are carrying out."

Sobolev said the council must "put an end" to alert missions of H-bombers of the U.S. Strategic Air Command flying "toward the frontiers" of the Soviet Union. Russia has a resolution before the council calling for such action, and suggesting that the inspection plan be referred to a summit meeting.

To Avert Russian Veto
The original Russian protest was touched off by a dispatch by Frank H. Bartholomew, president of United Press, telling of SAC alert flights by H-bombers and a foolproof system that kept them from unintentionally starting a war.

Baby Falls From 2nd Story, Unhurt

ST. LOUIS (UP)—An 18-month-old baby crawled out of a second story window today, fell 25 feet to a concrete sidewalk below, and apparently was not even hurt.

However, little Larry Cole, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frazier Cole, was taken to Homer G. Phillips Hospital for observation.

Police quoted Mrs. Cole as saying the baby apparently climbed over the back of a living room couch and out through the open window.

House Group Adds 26 Million for Unemployed

By UNITED PRESS

The House Appropriations Committee voted 26 million dollars more for federal unemployment program today and again criticized the administration for its "reluctance" to recognize the problem.

The money was included in a $28,761,802 urgent deficiency program. It covers unemployment payments to jobless veterans and federal employees. It was the second such allowance voted this year to cope with spending up to the start of the new fiscal year, July 1.

Senate Republican Leader William F. Knowland reported meanwhile that the president was "very pleased" with House passage of his jobless pay bill as a substitute for a more liberal Democratic program.

Elsewhere in Congress, Defense Gen. Thomas D. White, Air Force chief of staff, endorsed President Eisenhower's controversial defense reform plan as a "vital step toward strengthening the national military machine."

Nixon: Sen. Bourke B. Hickenloper (R-Iowa) protested in the Senate that Arkansas heaped "indignities" on Vice President Richard M. Nixon Thursday at the President Arturo FONDIZI. Nixon, who represented President Eisenhower at the ceremony, had to elbow his way through inaugural crowds and arrived 10 minutes late.

WILL BE FLOODED — Arkansas National Guardsmen and Airmen were called out to help sandbag a break in the McKinney Bayou levee south of Garland City, Ark., in an effort to hold back rising flood waters. If the levee breaks, as it is expected to do, 1,600 families will be flooded from their homes.

DEMONSTRATOR — Police take a demonstrator into custody after he shouted: "Go Away, Nixon," as Vice President, Richard Nixon arrived in Montevideo, Uruguay, beginning a goodwill tour of eight Latin American countries, was generally well received, but a group of university students booed him and passed out handbills denouncing Nixon as a representative of "the North American oppressors" of Latin America.

Melons Can Be Protected From Beetles

A small amount of dielidrin dusted on hills after planting or replanting of watermelons, cantaloupes or cucumbers will give protection from cucumber beetles, says County Agent Oliver L. Adams.

The simplest method of application is to place the dielidrin dust in a jar with the lid made shaker-type by driving a 20-penny nail from inside. Make six to eight well spaced holes so that the dust will flow freely. Use 1 1/2 to 2 1/2 per cent dielidrin dust. Dielidrin has a long residual or protective action.

Cucurbit type plants coming up and on to blooming should be dusted when the plants are dry using an even application of the dielidrin or cryolite at the rate of 10 to 20 pounds of dust per acre. The dust should be applied at 3 to 4 day intervals as needed. The application should be repeated after rains. Other dusts that may be used are 1% lindane or 4% malathion but these two give protection only for a short time.

After blooming watermelons and cucumbers should be dusted only with the 4% malathion. The malathion should be applied after 3:00 p. m. so as not to kill honey bees which are necessary in pollination. The residual type insecticides should not be applied after the vines show blooming as the residue is poisonous and the odor would make the cucumbers unfit for processing into pickles.

No Word on Removal of National Guard

LITTLE ROCK (UP)—State Adjutant General Sherman T. Clinger said today he has not received any word from Washington on whether federalized National Guard troops will be removed from Camp Robinson before Boys and Girls States.

Clinger said he had second-hand reports that the Army would decide by May 10 on whether men would be transferred. He said a total of 650 boys and 850 girls are expected at the two citizenship encampments sponsored annually by the American Legion.

Clinger said he expected the Army to cooperate.

You Hong Ting, 37, and his wife, Leung Tam Yung, 24, were arrested when agents found nearly 10 pounds of pure heroin in a jade-decorated tea can in Ting's gift shop.

End of Rains in Arkansas Not in Sight

By UNITED PRESS
The end of rains that have flooded Arkansas the past week were not in sight today.

The forecast called for scattered showers and thundershowers mainly in the west and north portion today, tonight and Saturday, and over the state again generally Sunday.

More than six inches fell on Arkadelphia and vicinity during the 24 hours to 7 a.m. today. Rain continued general and heavy over the entire state.

Virtually every lake and river flooded, some streets ran with water; at least 28 highways were closed to traffic; a number of schools were closed, and the red-white football game in Little Rock Saturday night was rescheduled for May 10.

The Ouachita River near Crossett, normally a little more than 300 feet across was eight miles wide early today.

National Guardsmen appeared to be holding their own with the levee at Garland City near Texarkana. Spokesmen said that if no area went without heavy rain for another 48 hours, the battle was won. A small break let water into about 900 acres late Thursday, but the main levee appeared to be holding.

Many Homes Threatened
The approximately 1,600 persons whose homes would be inundated if the levee developed a major break live in a widely-scattered lowland farming area and the town of Garland City, a community of 300 persons, was not expected to be threatened.

However, the situation at this levee remained serious as nearly 200 civilian volunteers, National Guardsmen from Texarkana, Hope and Prescott and Air Force personnel kept throwing sandbags into place to keep a few steps ahead of the rising, muddy water.

The dikebuilders, many of whom had gone 48 hours without sleep, brought in 7,000 more sandbags Thursday from Texarkana. Seriousness of the situation was demonstrated to newsmen in Texarkana 22 miles away when a grocery store operator near the levee closed his store and evacuated. His telephone had been used by reporters to relay information.

1,600 May Have to Evacuate in Garland Area

By UNITED PRESS

Despite a breach which flooded about 900 acres Thursday night, a battalion of weary, mud-spattered floodfighters saw victory today in their four-day battle to save the homes of 1,600 persons "if it doesn't rain too hard in the next 48 hours."

Water poured through a break in an old, partially deteriorated section of a levee of McKinney Bayou late Thursday but the main part of the miles-long dike held.

Water filled the lowland farming area to a depth of more than a foot and covered U.S. Highway 82 for a three-mile stretch, although the highway was not closed. Five families living in the affected area were evacuated.

Other Fronts
Elsewhere on the Arkansas flood front:

—An estimated 500,000 acres in southeast Arkansas was under water.

—More than seven inches of rain in Pine Bluff flooded streets, drove families from their homes and forced the closings of schools.

—High water near Dumas forced Missouri Pacific to reroute its Little Rock-New Orleans trains.

—Anglers fished in a cotton field near Helena and caught fish from highway 35 between Monticello and Dermott.

—The Ouachita river stood 11.10 feet above floodstage at Camden, sending water over hundreds of acres in Ouachita county.

—El Dorado officials estimated damages at $200,000, and Union county officials placed the damage to roads and bridges at $150,000.

A National Guard spokesman said Thursday night the dike near Garland City "looks good if it doesn't rain too hard in the next 48 hours."

Civil Defense Director Mike Ayok said no effort was made to stop the torrent of water rushing through the gap. He said the break would probably help in relieving some pressure on the main section of the highly-sandbagged levee, where water measured 20 feet in depth.

Land Flooded
More than 60,000 acres of land already were under water and an additional 50,000 acres would be inundated if the main levee should collapse.

Meanwhile, it was the same wet story throughout southern Arkansas.

At Pine Bluff, 1.83 inches of rain drove about 40 families from their homes.

Religion in the News
By WILLIAM E. GILROY D.D.
In the years when I was growing up an important factor in my home was the religious papers that came week by week. My father was a typical country town merchant, but if he had a hobby I think it was doing what he could to encourage good reading in the homes of his customers.
In addition to his own Methodist papers and magazines, my father acted as an unofficial agent for other religious papers to which he induced his customers to subscribe.
It was a commendable hobby, and it must have left a good influence on many lives, as well as his own.
Among those papers one stands out: The Christian Herald, still an active paper, at that time edited by the famous Brooklyn preacher, T. DeWitt Talmadge.
The page which particularly interested me was one that bore the heading, "The Bible and the Newspaper" which linked current events with some biblical incident or passage.
I have often thought of how such a feature could be enlarged and enriched in our time when so much of world events and happenings are being enacted in what were Bible lands.
Names have been changed, but the old borders and conflicts, despite many superficial changes remain.
Yet in the news the parallels with much that is in the pages of the Bible are seldom noted.
Reference to conflicts, incidents and situations in Bible times would I think, throw considerable light on what is happening today, and might possibly help toward peaceful solution of the conflicts that threaten world peace.
As I have observed newspaperdom over the years, two things have given me much satisfaction.
One is the greatly increased attention given to religion in the daily newspapers.
The other is, in general, the increased intelligence and competence with which religious news is presented and discussed.
A recent item in my daily paper interested me particularly.
It was about a case in court in Boston over the possession of a
Bible.
It gave me a strange feeling to see the great Book of Life treated as a sort of antique, without any reference to its real and spiritual value, and it set me wondering about just how people value the Bible.
What does it mean to you? Is it is age, its binding, its type, its beauty, or is it the fact that as God's Book for Man's Life, it is available everywhere for even a few cents?

A court action over a Bible is about the poorest use to which it could be put in what seems to have been a useless family quarrel.

Faubus Says Real Story Not Told

EL DORADO (UP)—Gov. Orval E. Faubus said Thursday that if the people of Arkansas "knew the full story behind some racial incidents in New York and Washington they would be horrified."

Faubus spoke for an hour and a half to a civic club and touched on such varied topics as segregation, the state tourist business, the Arkansas Industrial Development Commission and the schools.

Faubus took another crack at the northern press and particularly Time and Life magazines, which have criticized his stand at Central High School. He called Life a "magazine for those who can't read and Time a magazine for persons who can't think."

The governor said that before people ask the government to make social changes, they should publicly advocate their views and try to get the majority on their side.

Faubus said there was "no easy solution" to the racial problem. He said the AJDC was "probably the best organization of its kind in the nation to attract industry" and said the agency had brought 29,000 new jobs to Arkansas with a payroll of more than $30 million.

Faubus complimented the Arkansas Parks and Publicity Commission as having produced "more intangible progress" than any other department of the state.

High and Low Temperatures

NEW YORK (UP)—The highest temperature recorded in the nation Thursday was 95 at Presidio, Tex., the U.S. Weather Bureau reported. Lowest recorded this morning was 18 at Big Piney, Wyo.

Commission Okays Dog Racing Season

LITTLE ROCK (UP)—The Arkansas Racing Commission Wednesday approved two 50-day meets for the Southland Racing Corporation dog track at West Memphis.

The dates authorized were June 27 to August 23 and August 25 to October 21. Last season, the track was open 90 days.

World War III. The dispatch was cleared by the Defense Department and described by Assistant Defense Secretary Murray Snyder as accurate and correct.

Sweden's compromise move added a paragraph to the American measure to include an expression by the council that discussions on the Arctic plan "might serve as a useful basis for the deliberations on the disarmament problem at a summit conference."

U.S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge opened today's debate by accepting the Swedish amendment in the apparent hope that it would avert Russia's 83rd Security Council veto.

over flood stage. The stream was expected to crest at 40 feet by Sunday. The record is 46 feet, set in 1944. Hundreds of acres of Ouachita county farmland is under water and some residents of lowlands along the river had been evacuated.

A number of families who were forced from their homes last week today returned to their still-damaged dwellings Thursday in the Crossett area.

R. R. Reynolds of the U.S. Forestry Service at Crossett said the area had received 15.65 inches of rain for the week ending at 5 p.m. Thursday. He said this was more than for any like period since 1931.

Miss Ruth Flynn of St. Louis, in charge of Red Cross operations, said about half of those who evacuated a week ago were back in their homes. She said all were "ready to leave again at a moment's notice" if waters should rise again.

Sunshine Scarce
The sun's rays have fallen on the Crossett area only about twice in 30-minute intervals in the last seven days.

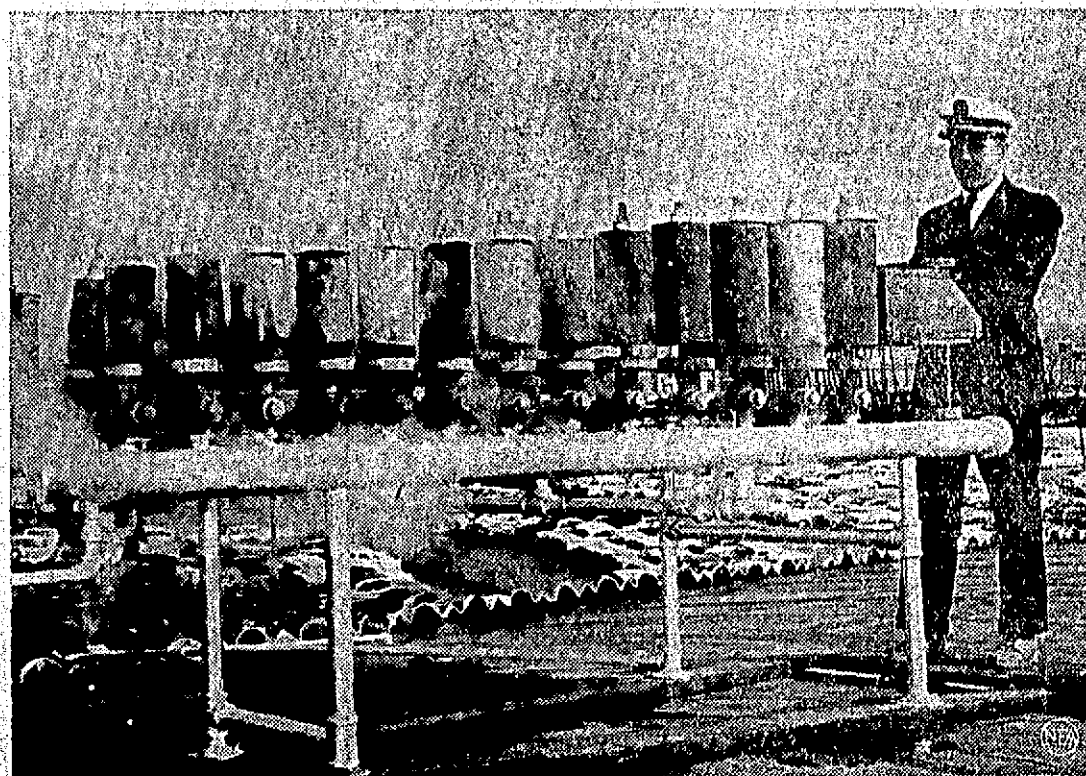

Water-filled streets in Dumas Thursday produced boatloads of frolicking children taking advantage of the high water but little damage was inflicted. At Reedville, three miles north of Dumas, high water forced several families to leave their homes.

At El Dorado, Mayor W. N. McKinney said Civil Defense officials and Army Engineers have estimated the city's damage from flash floods will be about $200,000. McKinney, criticized in some quarters for asking federal aid, defended his action by saying that the city could not have begun emergency repairs without federal aid. The city's severe damage suffered the most serious damage of the city's 44 inches of rain in 1958, nearly 20 inches have fallen in the last week.

Union County Judge Frank G. Hudson said $150,000 in damage was inflicted to the county's roads, bridges and culverts.

SEEN' IS BELIEVING—True enough, elephants can't fly, but they can ski. And to prove it, Beatty Hamid, the world's only water-skiing elephant, skims along the surface of the Hudson River en route from New York to New Jersey. Along for the ride is circus performer Marge Rusing. The aquatic elephant is featured in the Clyde Beatty and Hamid-Morton circus.

FIRST MATE, FIRST LOVE—From the time he was a little boy in Charleston, W. Va., Clark Hawley dreamed of playing the callopie, the musical trademark of inland waterways steamers. He'd sit for hours on the landing and listen to the oom-pah-pah of the "cally-ope" floating from the decks of the Avalon and Majestic which stopped in Charleston each summer. At night he would practice on the family parlor organ, imitating the style of the callopie player on such tunes as "Cruising Down the River," and "Alexander's Ragtime Band." In 1953 he jumped at an invitation to take an Ohio River cruise on the Avalon. But for "cally-ope" lover Clark it was a sad day. No music. No crew member could play the callopie. Clark volunteered and from that day on he has spent every excursion season aboard the Avalon. Now at 22 he is believed to be the youngest first mate on the Mississippi River system. Although his new duties keep him quite busy, he still manages (above) to find time occasionally to beat out a tune on the 32 battered steam whistles of the Avalon's callopie.

DOROTHY DIX

GIRLS YELL GROUCH AS DAD SETS RULES

Dear Dorothy Dix: I'm a man who has had wide experience in life and I consider myself broad-minded and liberal in my views. I have tried to be a firm guide to my two daughters, have made many sacrifices to give them "advantages," and as a rule they have confided in my judgment. There is one subject however on which I cannot approach them: That is boys. I don't try to choose their company — the young fellows who come to the house are good boys, though a bit brash. I try to explain the ease against going steady by telling them that it's likely to lead to early marriage, and I point out the advantages of shopping around. I regulate the amount of their dating, of course, since they are only 14 and 16. Now, my wife informs me that I'm regarded as a dictator, that the girls avoid these little talks like the plague, and that they resent my opinions. I've done my best; where have I failed?

this trying period. If you'd like it please send me a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dear Dorothy Dix: I'm in love with a 22-year-old widow, the mother of three children. I'm only 20. Should I marry her?

Dear J. G.: And became a child no. 42 Stop playing with the ridiculous notion of taking on a ready-made family at your age, and begin to take life seriously. You've made a game of it long enough.

Dear Dorothy Dix: My mother embarrasses me in front of my friends by asking them if they don't think I should help more around the house. Naturally they don't know what to answer. I do try to help, but Mom gets mad at the way I do things.

Dear T. T.: Or perhaps I should address this to "Dear Mom" and remind all parents that children have feelings, too. Most youngsters are very willing to co-operate, but they must be shown what to do. Embarrassing them before friends is scarcely the way to do it.

Dear Dorothy Dix: Is it possible for a woman to find real happiness married to a man who deeply loves her, but whom she doesn't love? I am very fond of Noel, but don't love him.

Dear K. M.: You ask if it's possible for a woman to find happiness in such a marriage, but you're not at all concerned about whether or not the man would be happy. It's scarcely a fair arrangement. You would be getting everything from the marriage, Noel would get nothing. No, ma'am, I'm not for it.

Dear Dorothy Dix: I'm not for it.

Dear Sir: Very often it's not what we say but how we say it that creates the impression. You may have lacked these "little talks" the wrong way. No group considers itself so capable of running its own affairs as young teenagers. Adolescence is the age of revolt, rebellion and a general breaking of chains. Handle your young people with humor instead of dealing out inflexible rules. Let them do some of the talking in course there must be, but they are these family conferences. Rules just as effective if given with a are just as effective if given with a To guide his children through adolescence a parent must be a diplomat, counselor, a patient job and above all he must have humor. Your daughters seem to be obedient, intelligent young ladies. Give them credit for their assets, and don't dwell on the worst possibilities. Best of luck — you'll need it for the next couple of years. My lenient, "Guiding the Adolescent," lists several books and pamphlets that might be of use to you in

Thomas Seems to Like That L.S. Short Fence

By FRED DOWN
United Press Sports Writer

Add Frank Thomas to the list of National League sluggers who are making Los Angeles' 250-foot fence the Dodgers' own worst enemy.

Always a dangerous long-ball threat, Thomas smashed his third and fourth homers in the L.A. shooting gallery Thursday night to lead the Pittsburgh Pirates to an 8-3 victory over the Dodgers. It was the sixth straight win for the Pirates — their longest streak since 1953 — and marked the Dodgers' 12th defeat in 15 games.

The ironic twist to the Dodgers' faltering start is the fact that in every case the visiting league slugs have played the major roles. A few years back, it was the Dodgers' solid run of right-handed hitters who formed the scourge of the league's pitchers. But San Francisco's Hank Sauer, St. Louis' Stan Musial (to left), Chicago's Lee Walls and now Pittsburgh's Thomas have taken to beating the Dodgers at their own game.

Law Homers
Adding insult to injury, pitcher Vern Law exploded a three-run homer in a five-inning sixth inning rally that kayoed Don Newcombe and clinched the game. Law, who was relieved by Ron Blackburn, rookie right-hander, when the Dodgers filled the bases with one out in their half of the frame, but received credit for his second victory of the season.

Rookies also played a major part in two other games Thursday — giving the lie to the word from spring training that this season's rookie crop was one of the poorest in many seasons.

Rookie Ray Semproch pitched a seven-hitter to give the Philadelphia Phillies a 7-0 victory over the San Francisco Giants and rookie John Gory homered in the ninth inning to provide the Chicago Cubs with a 3-2 triumph over the Milwaukee Braves in the other National League games.

In the American League, the Chicago White Sox edged out the Baltimore Orioles, 4-3. The Cleveland Indians routed the Washington Senators, 9-1, and the Boston Red Sox beat the Kansas City Athletics, 7-0.

Good for Four
Newcombe, making his first start since April 17, shut out the Pirates for four innings but they scored three runs to go ahead, 3-2, in the fifth on Thomas' first homer and four singles. The Pirates then hoped on Newcombe and Ed Roebuck for five big runs in the sixth, featured by Law's three-run homer.

Blackburn, who beat the Braves on opening day, snuffed out a Los Angeles rally in the sixth inning when he got Duke Snider to hit into a double play with the bases filled and one out.

Semproch gained his second win for the Phillies behind a shut-out attack which featured two doubles by Grady Hamner and a homer by Ted Kaczanski. Ruben Gomez was tagged for seven runs in 7-13 innings to suffer his first loss of the year for the Giants.

Coates Gets to Top For Richmond

By UNITED PRESS
It didn't take full Jim Coates long to work his way back into the Richmond Virginians' regular pitching rotation.

After two weeks of bullpen duty, the six-foot, four-inch right-hander was given his first starting assignment of the International League season Thursday night and reared maverick Eddie Lopat with a four-hit 3-0 victory over the Rochester Red Wings.

The Virginians collected only seven hits off the combined arms of starter Cal Browning and Jimmy Blaylock, but posted across a single run in the second inning and added two insurance markers in the fifth.

Bob Conley allowed only seven hits in pitching the Atlanta Braves to a 6-2 triumph over the league-leading Montreal Royals, while the Buffalo Bisons scored two runs in the 10th inning to down the Columbus Jets, 5-3.

JUNE GAME SOLD OUT — The June 3 night game here between the San Francisco Giants and the Milwaukee Braves is a sellout. Only 2,600 pavilion seats and 2,500 bleacher seats will go on sale the night of the game.

SMITH OPTIONED — Outfielder Bobby Gene Smith has been optioned to Omaha of the American Association and his place on the roster has been taken by Curtis Flood, who came to the club in a trade with the Cincinnati Redlegs. Flood was with the Cards during spring training but was sent to Omaha once the season got under way.

who have lost three of their last four games after an 8-3 start that carried them into first place.

Goryl cracked a 2-and-1 pitch by Bob Trowbridge with one out in the ninth to give the Cubs their third victory in four games and hand the Braves their third defeat in four games. Mac Drobowsky, making his first appearance since getting out of the Army, received credit for the win, aided by Le Walls' ninth inning of the campaign.

Burdette Unsuccessful
Lew Burdette made his third straight unsuccessful start for the Braves although Trowbridge was charged with the defeat.

Billy Pierce, ace of the White Sox staff, pitched out of eighth and ninth innings to preserve Jim Wilson's second win of the season. Sherman Lollar, subbed home two runs for the White Sox and they added two more on run-scoring hits by Luis Aparicio and Nelson Fox. Connie Johnson was the loser.

Ray Narleski pitched a five-hitter and Mickey Vernon hammered a homer and a triple for the Indians, who routed bonus pitcher Ralph Lument in 2-3 innings. It was the third win of the season for Narleski, who yielded five hits including three by Albie Pearson.

Bob Cerv belted his seventh homer of the season and third in two days for the Athletics but the Red Sox rallied for two runs in the ninth to pull out the decision.

Marly Keough tied the game with a pinch single and scored the winning run on a double by Jimmy Piersall. The Delack was the winner and Tom Gorman the loser.

Silky Sullivan Is The Talk of the Derby

By RAY AYRES
United Press Sports Writer

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UP)—Silky Sullivan, the glamor boy of the 1958 Kentucky Derby, was an enigma at Churchill Downs today.

Horsemen in the stable area firmly believe he does not have a chance in Saturday's classic. Experts in the press box rate him no better than a luke-warm third choice. But the town folks in Derbyville are dead sure Silky has the winner's purse locked up.

Teenagers in Louisville no longer whistle after pretty girls. "Oh, you Silky," they shout. Taxidivers pull over to the curb and stare at you in disbelief if you pick any other horse to win. Bartenders won't serve you if you suggest Silky Sullivan may be just a little late against class horses like Tim Tam and Jewel's Reward.

Sixteen three-year-olds have been entered in the mile and one-quarter. It's doubtful the crowd at Churchill Downs will pay any attention to 15 of them. And this race track, which has resounded with the cheers of thousands over the years, undoubtedly will rock from the time Willie Shoemaker turns Silky Sullivan loose from far in the rear until he hits the finish.

Attracts Crowd
Silky has become a common sight on the track at Churchill Downs since he arrived from California. But work still stops when he enters the track all decked out in red trimmings and the sun shining on his copper-colored coat. There always is a crowd around his barn even when the stall doors are shut.

"There was a rush to the rail Thursday when trainer Reggie Cornell gave Silky his final workout for the Derby. The son of a Sullivan, an Irish stallion, went a mile in 1:42 3/5. Typically he dragged through the first three furlongs in 41. But he did the last three in 36 3/5."

It was just another workout and you might not have noticed it at all except for the size and power of this handsome colt.

"This is Calumet Farm country. It has entered a proven, game colt named Tim Tam in hopes of adding a seventh Kentucky Derby trophy to the mantlepiece on the farm near Lexington. And Tim Tam turned in an impressive performance only last Tuesday when he overcame repeated trouble to win the Derby trial, his fifth stake win this year."

Yet unless the professional bettors wager heavily on this solid contender, the avalanche of two, five and tens from the masses could make Silky the favorite.

3 Make Chance Entries
Mys. Elizabeth Graham of Maine Chance Farm entered three horses—Jewel's Reward, Jet's Alibi and Ebony Pearl. No horse has finished ahead of Jewel's reward car already has scored in five Derbies, one with Hoop R. for jockey Ivan Parke, who now competes.

Despite Arcaro, Manny Yenza who rides Jet's Alibi and Dave Erb who rides Ebony Pearl, the Maine Chance trio are only three other horses old Silky will go supplanting by when he starts to Whatever Happened to Eddie Waitkus?

By UNITED PRESS
Eddie Waitkus, a slick-fielding first baseman and a dependable hitter, was one of the fired up "whiz kids" who drove the Phillies to the National League pennant in 1956. Brought up by the Cubs, in 1946, Eddie moved to the Phillies for the '49 season but after battling 306 in 54 games he was the victim of a bizarre shooting by a bobby soxer in Chicago. The episode nearly cost Waitkus his life but he bounced back the very next season and led the league in singles (154) while helping the whiz kids to the pennant. In 1951, he hit .286 over nine campaigns. Whatever happened to Eddie Waitkus now? He lives in Buffalo, N.Y., where he is sales manager for a trucking firm.

Fraley Likes Jewel's Reward in the Derby

TODAY'S SPORT PARADE
By OSCAR FRALEY
United Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UP)—This was a day in the spring three years ago after Fearless Fraley picked the Milwaukee Braves to win the National League pennant and the voice on the other end of the line was choked with gratitude.

"Thank you, Fearless," said Harold Farwell, business manager of the then Brooklyn Dodgers, "for not putting the kiss of death on us."

So the Dodgers won the pennant — and their first world championship.

Which may seem like a far cry from the Kentucky Derby but, as events developed yesterday, it's only a whisper. Because right after old earless picked Bellini Chief to win Saturday's run for the roses, the owners busted a splint.

But, don't despair children, I've got another hot one.

This one, you'll have to understand, sends me slightly to chalk what with my original choice confined to quarters. When you cut chalk in the parlance of horse highway, you are taking one of the favorites.

Predicts Jewel's Reward's Reward is carrying my degree over the chocolate brown racing strip at Churchill Downs Saturday afternoon. It actually isn't going to cost me my membership in the knock-down-the-favorites club.

I won't need an armored car to take home my payoff but, with my big longshot sitting this one out, the Jewl looks like the best of the rest. Tim Tam and Silky Sullivan figure to get most of the action at the mullet windows so the price shouldn't be disgraceful.

My only hope is that this choice will remain a secret until they parade to the post. If Eddie Arcaro hears that I have picked his mount he is likely to give up nailing riding and start something easy like playing football for the Chicago Bears. The Jewl, I hear, is incommunicado while Elizabeth Arden Graham's beauticians give him a permanent, so I've no worry there.

Kiss of Death
The news that old earless has put the kiss of death on the Jewl will be received with great jubilation, naturally, in Tim Tam's camp.

Palmer Has Comfortable Lead in Texas

FORT WORTH, Tex. (UP)—Arnold Palmer, Latrobe, Pa., the Masters champion who proved a master of Colonial Country Club's tortus par with a record-equaling 34-31.65, packed a comfortable three-stroke lead into the second round of the $5,000 Colonial National Invitation golf tournament today.

Stan Leonard, the Canadian who sacked up the $10,000 top money in last week-end's "Tournament of Champions," was a member of a threesome bracketed only three strokes back of the last-charging Palmer. Others in the close-purged bracket were Tommy Bolt of Paradise, Fla., and Lloyd Mangrum of Apple Valley, Calif.

Four others got in with sub-par 68s, paced by semi-retired Byron Nelson of Roanoke, Tex. Paul Hayber of Worcester, Mass., Gardner Dickinson, Panama City, Fla. and Jay, Herbert of Sanford, Fla. also had 68.

Ed Oliver of Hasperia, Calif., Gene Littler of Singing Hills, Calif., and Johnny Palmer of Tulsa, Okla., were bunched at par 70.

Billion for Jobless in Three Months

WASHINGTON (UP)—More than one billion dollars in unemployment compensation benefits was pumped into the economy during the first three months this year, Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell said today.

He said 2,700,000 workers received the benefits every week during the opening quarter of 1958.

An estimated 700,000 exhausted their benefits during this period, Mitchell said. 3,500,000 idle workers are drawing jobless benefits now. Of the remaining 1,500,000 unemployed, he said nearly 500,000 are youngsters who had not held jobs before and could not qualify under a pending Democratic bill.

Another 800,000 Mitchell said, are either casual farm workers or domestics whose work records, for eligibility under the Democratic bill, would be difficult to establish.

TWO MILLION ISRAELIS
JERUSALEM, Israel (UP)—Israel's population has passed the two million mark. A government announcement said that nearly 1,200,000 persons had immigrated to Israel since it gained independence in 1948. The population 10 years ago was about 810,000.

BUTANE TRUCK EXPLODES
LAFFITE, La. (UP)—A butane truck exploded as it was being loaded on a barge early Thursday, setting fire to a nearby grocery and service station. Police said the driver of the truck was injured and the two businesses burned to the ground.

quartets Silky Sullivan's elen undoubtedly will give all hands an extra portion of the pot here.

Because some spalpeen is always remembering that I liked the likes of such as Native Dancer, fouled by Dark Star, Nashua (beaten by Swaps), Bold Ruler (fourth to Iron Liege) and Joe Louis the night he fought and was flattened by Rocky Marciano.

But if Arcaro can keep the Jewl from drifting wide at the top of the stretch—as he did that day in 1941 with a "drifter" named Whinaway—you can look for the cosmetic colt to be right there when they take the picture. Eddie Arcaro is a good hand at handling such situations so from here it looks like his sixth Derby triumph.

Still, if you're a die-hard saddle-planker, you should see the Jewl as anything other than a sure bet. A real colt, you know, is a real colt. You saw Rocky's colt, called Arcaro, who just might get up to give the Jewl a run for it in the final yards.

Silent Death Awaits Man in Space Travel

By JOSEPH L. MYLER

United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON (UP) — Data from U.S. satellites disclosed the possibility today that invisible and silent deaths awaits man if he ventures more than 1,000 miles into space without heavy shielding against radiation.

In the region beyond 1,000 miles, it was revealed, Explorers I and II ran into yet unidentified rays hundreds of times more intense than scientists had expected.

On the other hand, the chances of damage to spaceships from meteors turn out to be "extremely small," and problems of temperature control are easily licked.

This and other information from America's entries in the satellite derby were reported publicly for the first time at an unusual joint meeting of the National Academy of Sciences and the American Physical Society, Russia has yet to make a similar report of information gathered by the now deceased Sputniks I and II.

Five-Hour Limit

The U.S. satellite information was disclosed by scientists participating in the American program for the International Geophysical Year. The radiation report came from Dr. James A. Van Allen, University of Iowa physicist who designed cosmic ray instruments for the Army Explorers launched Jan. 31 and March 26.

The instruments do not tell just what kind of radiation they ran into. But if the high rates were produced by a radiation dosage of 100 of a roentgen per hour, five hours of such exposure would be equivalent to the maximum permitted atomic workers for an entire week.

"This," the report said, "could mean that it would not be safe for a human being to remain more than 1,000 miles out in space for more than five hours—unless he could be adequately shielded with lead or other layers of enough mass and density to block such dangerous quantities of the penetrating invisible light known as X-radiation."

Van Allen said, however, the dangerous zone may be limited to a region of space only a few hundred or a few thousand miles deep. Later satellites may tell.

Can Control Temperature

Release at 9 a.m. edt
Meanwhile, scientists of the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory, Cambridge, Mass., reported preliminary information from visual satellite sightings. They said the atmosphere around 250 miles up is 14 times more dense than had been suspected. Nevertheless, the air at that altitude weighs only about "two ounces per cubic mile."

End 9 a.m. edt release matter

Scientists of the California Institute of Technology Jet Propulsion Laboratory reported that simply temperature controls designed for Explorer I proved the possibility of making space safe for man as far as heat and cold are concerned.

They covered about 25 per cent. of the instrument package with quarter-inch stripes of heat-radiating aluminum oxide. Data from the satellite showed its inner temperature remained in the range of 32 to 104 degrees Fahrenheit, well "within the range of human survival."

Dag Tells of Urgency for Disarmament

UNITED NATIONS (UP) —

Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjöld said today there is a "sense of urgency" that demands agreement upon disarmament lest "human impatience or human failure" may lead to war.

He told a news conference there is "no foreseeable time limit" but the development of the East-West arms race "makes it impossible to look with equanimity upon the diplomatic game" being conducted while governments "discuss and write letters" about the situation.

This, he said, is why he made his unusual intervention in the United Nations Security Council last Monday when he welcomed the United States proposal for an Arctic "open skies" inspection system and appealed to the Soviet Union to treat it in good faith.

Hammarskjöld recalled that he had previously welcomed Russia's announcement that it would suspend nuclear tests and he saw no difference in the importance of that statement made at a news conference, and his support of the American proposal in the Security Council.

"The United States was reported today to have accepted a compromise Swedish plan in hopes of regaining its position with that of the Soviet Union."

But there was still no word from the Russians. Their delegation was waiting final instructions following Hammarskjöld's appeal in the Security Council for Russian good faith.

Newman climbed into the light wagon, picked up the lines and started off heading northward across the ranch to the road, riding out in full sight of the six farmers, who were spread out in the distance.

They started toward them in a clump, saw the farmers assemble and come toward them. The three gunfighters swerved to the left and led the farmers in that direction. Then, when the farmers realized they were leaving the threat and began to follow, the gunfighters suddenly wheeled their horses and headed northward.

By that time the dynamite wagon had crossed the Barkersville Road and was rolling swiftly along the road in the direction of Lobo ranch headquarters.

The three gunfighters got together in a tight group and rode for a hundred yards or so, then, suddenly wheeling their horses, opened fire on the farmers. The latter promptly scattered, but assembling after a few moments began to return the fire of the gunfighters. The gunfighters promptly turned and rode off again.

The six farmers did not pursue. They had been left behind as a rear guard; they had not been told about any wagons that might attempt to run the gauntlet.

The dynamite wagon, with the gunfighters keeping behind it at a safe distance, continued along the Lobo road for two miles or more, then the driver left the road and took a northwesterly direction toward Lobo River, which would in turn lead him to the dam, between five and six miles from Lobo headquarters and perhaps nine or 10 miles from the Weber ranch.

Charlie Weber had left Kamplink and Novak in charge of the farmers at Lobo. They were to continue the encircling of the ranch, but were not to provoke a general fight unless the forces at the ranch tried to break out. Insisted on a fight, which Weber thought unlikely.

Weber and four of the younger farmers were mounted on the best available horses and were trotting across Lobo range in the direction of Lobo Dam.

They were two miles from the ranch when one of the men raised a shout. Weber pulled up his horse, turned and less than a half-mile away saw a wagon coming out of a shallow swale. The wagon was going at a stiff clip, north by west.

"I think that's it," Weber said.

He turned his horse and started toward the wagon, riding in an oblique direction to cut the wagon's path. He had gone no more than a hundred yards, when the farmers following, with three riders came out of the swale that had disgorged the wagon.

The riders saw the farmers and dashed forward. "Pull up!" roared Weber, drawing his own mount to an abrupt halt.

The farmers milled around. Weber, waiting for the attackers to come within range, suddenly grasped the tactics, he shouted.

"After the wagon," he shouted. As the farmers started, the gunfighters opened fire. The range was too great for accurate revolver shooting, but bullets began to sing about Weber and his friends. They continued on, however, and the gunfighters suddenly broke and headed after the wagon.

They distanced the pursuing farmers on slower horses, but the slow horses were still faster than the team drawing the wagon and it was apparent that the farmers would soon catch up with the wagon.

Tom Weber was finishing his coffee in the little shack on top of Lobo Dam when the caretaker came running into the cabin. "Lookit this!"

Weber, with Case at his heels, pounded out of the shack. A quarter of a mile away, a light wagon was rolling toward the dam. Behind and to the right, three horsemen were following and beyond them, four horsemen. As Weber looked he saw puffs of smoke coming from the guns of the foremost horsemen and after a moment he heard the faint banging of revolvers.

"What do you make of it?" exclaimed Fred Case.

Weber suddenly pointed at the wagon. "There's dynamite in that wagon."

"Dynamite!" cried the caretaker.

"Denver's ace in the hole," said Weber grimly. "They're going to blow up this dam."

"But those fellows are shooting at each other . . . !"

"The first bunch is protecting the wagon," Weber said. "The second group is trying to get it."

"They've got rifles," said Fred Case, who was armed only with a revolver.

He turned to the caretaker. "Give me your rifle." The caretaker, without question, ran into the shack. He returned in an instant with his rifle.

Weber grabbed the gun from his hand and, kneeling, sighted along the barrel.

He squeezed the trigger, looked down into the valley. He had overshot. He fired again more carefully.

Down on the ground the three gunfighters had heard the firing of Weber's rifle. They saw the men silhouetted on the rim of the dam. Almost as if by command, all three men sprang to the ground and began to fire at the men on the dam.

XXXV

Atop the dam, the caretaker cried out and pitched forward into space. Weber, about to fire, looked down as the caretaker's body hit the ground almost 80 feet below.

Weber took careful aim at the wagon. About to squeeze the trigger he suddenly winced. The wagon was to close. The force of a great explosion could conceivably damage the sluice gates.

Weber shifted his aim to the gunfighters on the ground.

A bullet whizzed past Weber, missing him by inches only. He squeezed the trigger. One of the gunfighters—Hopkins—seemed to rise up from the ground, then throw himself forward again.

A bullet kicked up dirt at Weber's knee. He pumped a fresh cartridge into the chamber, heard Fred Case suddenly gasp. The old foreman was hit and he was toppling forward. Weber, lunging for him, barely caught the old man. Case, although old, was fairly heavy and the momentum of his fall upset Weber. He had to fight to keep from being overbalanced himself, and in the struggle the rifle slipped from his grasp.

Weber hauled the old man back to safety, laid him down on the top of the earthen dam and then reached for his rifle. It was gone!

The rifle had fallen to the ground below. Tom Weber sprang to his feet and began running toward the end of the dam, toward the steps leading down to the valley floor. A bullet whizzed by him.

Weber and the three farmers were pushing their horses as hard as they could. The destruction offered by the men atop the dam was working greatly in their favor.

The farmers closed the distance rapidly, were within 200 yards of the gunfighters when Partridge and Honsinger became aware of their danger and stopped firing at Tom Weber, who had reached the cement stairs.

They squirmed about and to their horror saw the four determined farmers bounding down on them. Honsinger fired a quick rifle shot at the men, then threw aside his rifle and whipped out his revolver.

He was at his best with the revolver. He swept the gun up and, scarcely aiming, fired.

A horse screamed, broke in its stride and pitched forward to the ground, turning a complete somersault. Partridge also fired one last rifle bullet, taking aim. He yelled aloud as the man he had aimed at toppled from the saddle. He tried to pump another cartridge into the chamber, found the rifle was empty and threw it aside. He, too, went for his revolver.

"Come on, you slopoppers!" he screamed. "Come on . . . !"

The two remaining farmers had come too close now to retreat. They were forced to come on and were met for the two gunfighters at the closed distance.

Honsinger brought down Charlie Weber himself, and Partridge, springing to his feet, toppled the last man off his horse.

The two gunfighters had no time to celebrate their victory. As they whirled, they saw Tom Weber, taking the general firing line and firing at a jun-

He was nearly to the bottom. If Partridge and Honsinger could get him before he reached the ground . . .

They started running forward, toward the cement stairs. Behind them, wounded Charlie Weber fought to his knees, to his feet. He had lost his rifle and carried no revolver, but 30 feet away lay Tate Hopkins, a huddled lump. A rifle lay near his hand. Charlie Weber focused his eyes on it and staggered toward it.

It was Newman, the driver of the fateful dynamite wagon, who saw Weber. He had reached the dam, was pulling up his horses. He wanted desperately to get away from the wagon.

Jumping to the ground, he saw Charlie Weber reach the dead figure of Tate Hopkins, stoop with an effort and scoop up the rifle.

Newman cried hoarsely, thinking Weber was going to shoot at him—miss and hit the dynamite in the wagon. He went for his gun, threw a wild shot at Charlie Weber.

Partridge, running ahead of Honsinger, toward Tom Weber, was jolted to a halt by the shot from the unexpected direction. He whirled, saw Weber and, crying out, sent a snap shot at the old farmer. Weber recoiled from the bullet, dropped to his knees and raised Hopkins's rifle.

Ten feet from the ground, Tom Weber came to an abrupt halt on the steps. His tortured eyes shot past the approaching Honsinger, past Paul Partridge and on to his father, 100 yards away.

Honsinger skidded to a halt, fired at Tom Weber.

The bullet hit concrete just above Weber's head. Weber threw up his revolver, fired, and Honsinger on the ground below cried out and spun about.

Partridge fired a second time at Charlie Weber, knew that he scored. His face twisting into a terrible sneer, he turned to face Tom Weber.

Weber's gun was dangling at his side. He called out, "All right, Partridge!"

Partridge snapped up his gun, fired faster than he had ever fired in his life.

Weber's gun exploded a fraction of a second before Partridge's.

Partridge went over backwards, hit the ground and did not move.

Tax Take for April Runs $16.9 Million

LITTLE ROCK (UP)—Arkansas's total revenue from all sources in April was $16,925,203, including federal grants of $3,650,529, Revenue Commissioner J. Orville Cheney reported Wednesday.

He said the figure showed the state economy was fairly stable in the month, compared to other areas of the country. He cited the fact sales tax receipts were about the same as last year, while the gasoline tax receipts were $24,200 higher, as examples of the stability.

Cheney's report showed sales taxes in the month totaled $3,717,532 last month, while in April, 1957, the total was $3,610,033.

However, Cheney said he had expected the tax collections to be higher because the increase to three percent had been in effect only two months in April last year and many big purchases had been made under the two per cent level.

The commissioner said April income tax collections were $313,780 more than the $1,447,945 collected in April, 1957. State budget director Julian Hogan said the returns in this month would tell whether the state will realize the $23,000,000 the legislature expected when it revised the income tax base and increased other taxes.

Cheney said severance tax collections dropped $33,138 last month in comparison to April, 1957, in spite of the tax increase. He suggested rainy weather might have slowed sale of timber, one of the items under the severance tax, as a reason for the decrease.

The collection last month totaled $85,891.
